

diversity, teacher voice, and public dialogue

an evening with Kevin Kumashiro and Bree Picower

How can our public discourse about teaching and learning help or hinder multicultural education and education for social justice?

Kevin Kumashiro is the author of Bad Teacher! How Blaming Teachers Distorts the Bigger Picture, and the president-elect of the National Association for Multicultural Education.

Bree Picower is the author of Practice What You Teach: Social Justice Education in the Classroom and the Streets, a teacher educator, and a member of the New York Collective of Radical Educators.

Brought to you by HGSE Students for Diversity.

Questions? Contact Eve_Ewing@mail.harvard.edu or Christopher_Buttimer@mail.harvard.edu

Thursday, October 4
7 p.m. – Gutman Conference Center
6 Appian Way, Cambridge