

Lessons from New Orleans: A conversation with Education Activist Karran Harper Royal

10 years ago Hurricane Katrina destroyed much of New Orleans' infrastructure, including its public schools. Following the tragedy, NOLA schools were transformed almost overnight into an all-charter district. Come listen, ask questions and learn about the changes in New Orleans education and how local activists are fighting for the schools students deserve.

Karran Harper Royal works as an Education Advocate in New Orleans and as the Assistant Director of Pyramid Community Parent Resource Center where she is the co-host of Pyramid Parent Talk, a radio show on WBOK radio in New Orleans. She's a member of the Coalition for Community Schools, the Louisiana Coalition for Public Education and the New Orleans Education Equity Roundtable.
